

Cantus primus

Who lookes may leape and save his shins from knocks,

Who lookes may leape and save his shins from knocks, <sup>A</sup> Who tries may trust, else flattring friends shall find, else flattring friends shall find, He saves the Steed, that keeps him un - der locks, that keeps him un - der locks, un - der locks, <sup>B</sup> Who speaks with heed may bold - ly speake his mind, speake his mind, Who speaks with heed may bold-ly speake his mind, <sup>C</sup> But he whose tongue be-fore his wit doth runne, doth run, Oft speakes too soone, and grieves when he hath done, and grieves when he hath done, and grieves when he hath <sup>D</sup> done. But he whose tongue be-fore his wit doth runne, Oft speakes too soone, and grieves when he hath done, and grieves when he hath done, and grieves when he hath done.
