When younglings first on Cupid fix their sight
When younglings first (Superius) William Byrd (c.1540-1623)
Songs of sundrie natures (London, 1589)

When younglings first on Cupid fix their sight, their sight, and see him naked, blindfold and a boy, and a boy, though bow and shafts and fierbrand be his might, yet ween they he can work them none annoy, yet ween they he can work them none annoy, work them none annoy.

And therefore with his purple wings they play, for glorious see-meth love though light as feather, and when they have done, and when they have done, they ween to escape away, for blind men say they, say they, shoot they know not whither, shoot they know not whither, they know not whither, not whither, shoot they know not whither, shoot they know not whither.

But when by proof they find that he did see, that he did see, and that his wound did rather dim their sight, they wonder more how such a lad as he, should be of such surpassing power and might, and might, and might, should be of such surpassing power and might...
When younglings first (Superius) might:

Sing power and might, such surpassing power and might: but Ants have galls, but Ants have galls, have galls, so hath the Bee his sting, so hath the Bee his sting, then shield me heavens from such a subtle thing, a subtle thing, then shield me heavens from such a subtle thing, then shield me heavens from such a subtle thing, then shield me heavens from such a subtle thing, a subtle thing.

When younglings first on Cupid fix their sight, their sight, and see him naked, blind-fold and a boy, and a boy, though bow and shafts and fier-brand be his might, be his might, yet ween they he can work them none annoy, yet ween they he can work them none annoy. And therefore with his purple wings they play, for glorious see-meth love though light as feather, and when they have done, they ween to scape away, for blind men say they, say they, for blind men say they, shoot they know not whither, shoot they know not whither, shoot they know not whither, shoot they know not whither. But when by proof they find that he did see, that he did see, and that his wound did rather, did rather dim their sight, they wonder more how such a lad as he, should be of such
